“ A single memory of Charlie just won't sum the man up. You were the first friend I made as an adult. Made me laugh til I hurt. You brought life and laughs to everything. Roomed together and man those were the days! Lived together worked together, played pool and did dumb stuff together, you even saved me from jail when I was an idiot.

The last few years I didn't see or hear from you I always wondered, thought about you man. You made me break my mold and live. Knocked my square as hell edges off. Jesus man I just learned you died last night. All the years of all we had and I was the last to know. Life man. LIFE. I'll always remember who got my girl them Alligator shoes lmao and I know it's 1932 I was the first to have this!

The Upper Room man. The Upper room. You New York Cities. I swear man no one in life will ever replace you brother. National anthems for you next time. All for you.
